Excerpt: . observations on the language and literature china. Amidst the general progress which has been made by our countrymen in knowledge, their advancement in subjects connected with the Chinese empire, and its literature, has been very inconsiderable. One is at a loss to account for the almost total ignorance, which previous to the embassy of Lord Macartney prevailed in this country, respecting a people with whom we carried on such large dealings, while the French, for nearly a century before, had been prosecuting their researches with diligence and success. It is not easy to explain this singular listlessness, by saying that the subject was devoid of interest, for whether we consider the extraordinary nature of the government of China, or the no less extraordinary structure of its language, it would seem that it had been necessary only to know that such things were, in order to produce much industry in their investigation. Those of our own nation, from whom the first information on these subjects was to have been expected, were, without doubt, the agents employed by us to superintend our affairs in China. Were it under no other consideration than that of policy, that these persons had regarded the literature of that empire as deserving of notice, this consideration alone, when we remember the magnitude of the commercial relations, which as long ago as the middle of the last century subsisted between the two countries, would seem sufficient to have given it...
